Jobs in your free time

Bella : Tom, I'm thinking of working a bit during the holidays.

Tom: So am I. I'm only going away with my family for 2 weeks this summer and I will have quite a lot of time left to get some extra cash. I really want to buy the new I-phone but it's very expensive and my parents can only give me half the money. So, I thought I could get a summer job for a couple of weeks.

Bella: Yeah, I also want to buy a new computer and my parents can't really afford it. But to be honest, I don't know where to look. Do you have any ideas? Have you already started looking?

Kelly: Maybe I could look for a summer job as well? Let's have a look at these job advertisements together, guys.

Kelly: Would you like to work full-time or part-time?

Bella: Part-time, I think.

Tom: Me too. I want to have some time left to go to the beach in the afternoon.

Kelly: What would be your ideal job, Bella?

Bella: I don't really know, Kelly.

Kelly: What are your strengths?

Bella: My strengths? How do you mean?

Kelly: You know, things you are good at and things you enjoy doing.

Bella: Ah, I think I'm friendly, all my friends say I have a pleasant personality...and I'm helpful- I always like to help people..... Ah, I'm sociable as well, I really like working with people.

Tom: Bella, I think you are also very reliable- you ALWAYS keep promises and when you say something, you always do it.

Bella: Oh, thank you, Tom! You're very kind.

Bella: Do you think I can also say that I'm fluent in English- is it a strength as well?

Kelly: Oh, yes! It's a really great strength.

Kelly: I wonder, are you also willing to work weekends?

Bella: Sure! Why not.

Kelly: Then, how about working as a shop assistant, Bella. You could apply for a job in the souvenir shop. They often need help.

Bella: It sounds great, Kelly! I could work indoors and learn new people skills.

Tom: What about me? What job should I apply for, Kelly?

Kelly: Do you like working with people Tom? Or would you prefer to work with computers?

Tom: Well...I'm computer literate, I mean, I'm able to use a computer well, but working with computers sounds really monotonous and boring.

Tom:To be honest, I'd like to be a vet.

Kelly: A vet?

Tom: You know, a person who helps sick animals.

Kelly: Right, right.

Tom: I have previous experience of looking after pets. Also, I have my own dog. I look after him, feed him, take him for a walk and play with him every day. So, what's your advice? What should I do?

Kelly: It really sounds like you are very responsible and very good with animals. How about finding a job as a dog sitter? I'm sure you'd love it!

Bella: If I were you, Tom, I would definitely look for a dog sitter job- you are the perfect candidate!

Tom: A dog sitter?

Kelly: You know, a person who looks after other people's dogs. You could help people who live in a flat, work full time and can't be with their dogs during the day.

Tom: Oh, what a great idea, Kelly! I could gain some good experience and save money to go on holiday too.

Kelly: What would your ideal job be? Why? What are your strengths?
